1991 Chamber of Commerce banquet

Cuevas named Chamber's Outstanding Citizen

BY TRACI BONNEY
AND T.H. TOUPS

Sea Coast Echo publisher Ellis Cuevas was named the county's Outstanding Citizen of 1991, Friday by the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce.

After an opening address, Chamber president Basil Kennedy presented several awards, including Outstanding Citizen.

In his address, Kennedy mentioned Chamber accomplishments in 1991 and talked about future goals.

"Probably the most important thing I hope we can do in 1992 is to have a revitalization of the committee life within the Chamber," he said. Explaining that the Chamber has been doing much of its work with a relatively small group of people, he expressed a desire to see all Chamber members involved in some activity.

Kennedy praised the Chamber's new connections with the Bay St. Louis Business Association and the Diamondhead Business and Professional Association.

"I think it is very productive for the three organizations to do that and come up with a method of joint membership," he said. "We have arranged to have a Chamber person present at well over 50 percent of the meetings of these organizations, so that we can keep up with what they are doing and offer our assistance in helping them with their projects."

Other major changes in the Chamber during the past year included moving to new offices in Colonial Plaza, and the employment of Cindy Vernon as

Hydrogen chloride cloud passes over Bay Thursday

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

Early Thursday morning the Bay St. Louis bridge was closed to traffic as a hydrogen chloride gas cloud made its way over the Mississippi Sound.

Garry E. Ruff, DuPont DeLisle senior supervisor of safety, health and environment, reported a pressure buildup in the lines at the plant caused a leak of about 1,000 pounds of hydrogen chloride gas to escape into the atmosphere.

"The concentration was very low," he stated, "less than one part per million."

Hydrogen chloride forms hydrochloric acid when mixed with water.

Ruff said that during a routine system shutdown, a higher than usual pressure buildup caused the emergency rupture disk to open. The gas passed through a water scrubbing system, which reduced the amount that escaped through the exhaust stack.

A large white gas cloud reportedly formed and moved slowly over the bay toward the sound.

The gas began escaping at 12:30 a.m. Thursday. The Hancock County Sheriff Department was notified at 1:30 a.m.

Ruff said the wind was blowing about three miles per hour. DuPont is about three miles from the bridge, which reduced the urgency in closing the bridge.

The sheriff's department reported to have closed the bridge for about 15 minutes.

Ruff said two or three people were out on the bridge fishing when the cloud approached, and one person reported experiencing some eye irritation.

"The cloud was not very dangerous," continued Ruff, "irritating, but not immediately dangerous. We are presently investigating the cause for the pressure buildup."

The hydrogen chloride leak was the plant's first. There were two titanium tetrachloride leaks this year and two in 1990.

Pearl Harbor

swam around the stern of the USS Maryland and another boat that was ahead of us.

"I stayed in the water all during the first raid. The oil was getting pretty thick in the water by that time."

"Then I swam out to a pipeline running along Naval Air Station Ford Island. Where I got out of the water, on the beach there was some naval housing. A woman nearby came over yelling that her husband was on one of the battleships."

Just then, a nearby explosion knocked Perre unconscious. When he awoke, the woman was gone and no one else was nearby.

"When I came to my senses, I saw the USS Nevada passing by where I stood. One thing I'll never forget is that her underway colors were flying upside down," a signal that the ship was in distress.

"Because she was underway, the planes were concentrating on her. They came out of their dive and passed right over my head. They were so close I could see the pilots looking down.

"I got frustrated because I couldn't do nothing—all that training and I couldn't help—so I started picking up sticks and rocks and throwing them at the planes."

Perre also noticed that two Japanese planes had been downed—one fell in the harbor and the other crashed on the airfield.

"A real close buddy of mine, Ray Glover, ran up to me and grabbed me, and we headed for cover at the end of the runways. During a break in the firing, Glover saw a station wagon nearby. It was a plane guide vehicle, a follow-me wagon flying two checkered flags.

"We ran over and jumped in. The keys were still there, so we rode to the hangars. When we got inside the hangar, we were put to work belting ammunition."

"Shortly afterward, we had to abandon the hangars because the planes starting firing on them."

Perre and other sailors found their way to the top of a building, where they joined a machine gun crew.

"We stayed there 'til daylight. That was hectic, just firing and firing all night—at nothing. With all the confusion, everybody was shooting. Anytime one gun went off, they all went off."

The next day, Perre went to the boat landing and caught a ride back to the West Virginia, which had already settled on her port side. Perre went to where his division was located to see if anyone else were still below decks or if he could salvage his locker.

"It was all flooded below, so I couldn't go down there to get anything. I was advised at that time to return to Ford Island.

"When I got back, I heard the word being passed around that the Navy Exchange was being opened up and we could go get fresh clothes."

After finding food and clean clothing, Perre caught a shuttle ferry back to the Navy shipyard. All surviving battleship sailors were ordered to the baseball field, where they were reassigned to fill out the crews of those ships still able to operate.

Perre was assigned to the USS San Francisco, a heavy cruiser whose crew became one of the most distinguished in the war by earning a Presidential Unit Citation along with numerous battle stars.

Meanwhile, his family in Bay St. Louis had received a telegram stating that their son was missing. However, postcards and a letter from him, postmarked December 9 and 10 and telling them he was all right, relieved their fears.

Perre spent three years on the San Francisco before leaving active military service and continuing to work with the military as a civilian.

"QUOTEABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

Once again The Sea Coast Echo has made special arrangements with the Post Office to receive letters to Santa. We will forward the requests to the North Pole, after printing them in the newspaper.

Boys and girls may want to remind Santa with a letter of their wants for Christmas.

I know he has been busy getting ready for his annual run from the North Pole on Christmas Eve.

I will be looking forward to publishing letters to Santa.

Yesterday was the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

It sounds like a very long time ago, yet we have living among us several who were at Pearl Harbor in 1941.

World War II has been described many times as the 'War of Wars', and thousands of Hancock Countians fought for our freedoms.

Many left their native soil, never to return to it again.

I have had the privilege of talking to many of the veterans and even interviewing a few to tell their stories. I had the honor of speaking with two Pearl Harbor survivors this week.

We owe a great debt to those who fought the battles over the years for our freedoms.

We must always remember the men and women in uniform, even during peace time, their being in uniform enforces peace.

Residents and visitors do not want to forget the Festival of Lights scheduled for tonight beginning at 5 p.m. on Coleman Avenue.

A lot of treats are in store for those visiting the City of Waveland.

While on festivities, members and guests do not want to forget the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's Christmas After Hours open house from 5 to 7 p.m. on Monday.

The chamber is located in the Colonial Plaza next to the Peoples Bank on Highway 90 near Carroll Avenue.

This will be a time for a cup of cheer and some good friendly conversations.

Admission is $3 plus a business card.

Dealing with health care

A bill which I am co-sponsoring addresses many of the problems we have in Mississippi with health care.

While looking at this issue, however, there are some rules we need to follow. We don't want massive national programs with unlimited national controls and costs that the federal government picks up. What we do need is a way to encourage

WASHINGTON REPORT

By Senator Thad Cochran

Senators host governor-elect Fordice in Washington

U.S. Senators Thad Cochran and Trent Lott hosted a Capitol Hill reception recently for Mississippi Governor-elect Kirk Fordice.

The reception with the Mississippi congressional delegation concluded the governor-elect's day-long round of meetings with administration officials, which included President Bush and Vice-President Quayle and members of the President's cabinet.

"He met with members of the administration to discuss the needs of Mississippi. I think he's going to have greater access to the Washington government than any governor we've ever had," said Cochran.

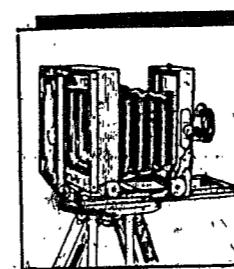

"It was also good to get the delegation together to let the governor know that we're going to work with him to help make his administration a great success," said Cochran. "We've got to work together, Republicans and Democrats, and that's the message from this meeting."

"We're delighted to have Governor-elect Fordice in Washington. It's very important that we all work together," said Senator Lott. "Thad and I certainly are going to work with him, and I know that the House delegation will certainly do everything they can, too."

"It's always absolutely thrilling to meet with the President of the United States," said Fordice. "He was very happy with our victory, and we shared in that joy. We also talked a lot about the economy of the United States and getting some kind of economic growth package going as fast as we can."

"We're going to be working with the governor for the next four years. He's got to have our help up here. He knows that we in Mississippi have to have federal help in order to do a lot of the projects that we need done in the state of Mississippi. I think we'll have a good working relationship with him over the next four years," said Cong. Mike Espy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Veteran commends VA Hospital

To the Editor,
I would like to comment on the care and services I received during a recent stay in the Biloxi VA Hospital.

Forty years ago I did not think very much of having to go overseas to the Korean war. It was expected of me and it was my duty as an able-bodied man. Now as I look back I know it was a proud thing, for I am a proud veteran and am likewise proud of our Biloxi veterans hospital.

I received good care. The hospital was clean and very friendly.

I'm proud of our VA Hospital, proud to be an American, proud to be a veteran, and God bless you all.

executive director. After dinner and the conducting of Chamber business, several awards were presented. Sea Coast Echo general manager Randy Ponder accepted the Outstanding Citizen Award on Cuevas's behalf.

In presenting the award, Kennedy commented: "Our recipient has spent his lifetime in this area and spends most of his waking hours working to make our community a better place to live. Our recipient is very humble in taking credit for his activities on behalf of community organizations and frequently dismisses his efforts as 'part of the job'."

Cuevas is a St. Stanislaus graduate. He worked for several years for a Waveland business and served in the Army before beginning work for The Sea Coast Echo. He and his wife Jane have been married 28 years.

His community involvements include: director, Bay St. Louis Rotary Club, with which he is a past president and Paul Harris Fellow, and was active in forming the Diamondhead Rotary Club; president of United Way of Hancock County; chairman, RSVP advisory council; Hancock County Youth Task Force vice chairman; Chamber board director for many years; director, Goodwill of South Mississippi;

American Legion Post 139 Judge Advocate; Hancock County Sand Beach Advisory Council vice chairman; Tri-County Marine Task Force member; perpetual member, Chamber Beautification Committee; Hancock County Community Services organization member;

South Mississippi United Way steering committee member; member and former board member, Mississippi Press Association; and a member of Main Street United Methodist Church, where he has served as usher chairman for the past 18 years.

Via a prepared statement, Cuevas remarked: "When I was told of this prestigious honor, I asked if they had the right person."

"I know there are many others in our community more deserving than I am to be so honored. Many of these people's deeds are not known, because they are not as visible as I am in my position."

"I only wish I could be here tonight to receive this great honor in person, but my wife Jane and I made vacation plans months ago. This is the first Chamber banquet I have missed in many years."

"Yes, I am involved in many things within our community, but I feel it all goes with the territory. I do have to give credit to my dedicated staff at The Sea Coast Echo, because without their help, I would not be able to be so involved."

"The needs of many are being reached through volunteer efforts in our community today, yet there are others who are being overlooked. Working together, we can find solutions and ways to meet the needs of our community."

"I have been blessed with many friends, some for a lifetime, others for only a brief period. I treasure each and every one."

"It is great to have been born in America, and even greater to have been born in Hancock County. Thank you, and God bless each and everyone of you."

Other award recipients included: Jennifer Lee, Miss Chamber; Fred DeBent and Martha Van Peski, service awards; Felix Seeger accepting a beautification award on behalf of himself, Betty Benvenutti, Ellis Cuevas, Norieta Robinson, Carol Vegas and the late Warren Carver and Prim Hilliker; and Gerry Lane Motors (Eric Lane and A.C. many problems facing health care such as inflated costs, poor health center access and rampant malpractice premiums. It was through the task force that we finally drew up a measure to deal with such problem.

This bill does a number of positive things to expand access to health care through a combination of different approaches:

- Tax credits: Individual tax credits for purchasing health insurance and health care services would reach almost two-thirds of those without insurance and with limited access to care; tax deductibility of health insurance premiums for self-employed and purchasers of non-employer health care packages; tax credits for small businesses which cover employees and dependents but don't qualify for group coverage; and preventive care tax credits;

Creation of a public program which will allow states to provide health care coverage to individuals within the poverty level that are not eligible for Medicaid;

- A Community Health Care Center program which, over the next five years, would provide health care to about 7.5 million additional people;

- Greater assistance to rural areas which suffer from inadequate access to quality health care and expansion of the National Health Service Corps to provide these areas with health care professionals;

- Insurance reforms and small business purchasing groups;

- Flexibility and demonstrations on the state level for universal access plans and cost containment initiatives by using funds from federal programs such as Medicaid and Medicare.

This proposal addresses the problems of health care, but it does so through fiscal responsibility. It reforms medical liability laws which inflate malpractice premiums, encourages the development of managed care, creates new programs allowing states to emphasize primary and preventive care, focuses on preventive care such as childhood immunization and community health centers, and limits health care costs for small businesses through insurance reforms and purchasing groups.

Mississippi has a number of health care problems but none we can't cure. I have co-sponsored child immunization legislation and sent a letter to Health & Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan and President Bush urging them to support such a measure. Also, I have worked to get roughly $1.5 million for Mississippi through HHS's Healthy Start program, to study ways to combat infant mortality.

Through hard work and dealing with the issue, not running away, we can bring the quality of health care in Mississippi up to the national level.

On giving painlessly

REFLECTIONS ON LIFE

By Father Jerome LeDoux, SVD

for the support of churches, schools and teachers?

Unfortunately, we all know the answer to that question. It is never a problem of finding money for any of these things, but rather a simple ranking of priorities. If necessary, Congress or any ruling body will set their teeth and levy taxes.

We want a constant high level of services, but we do not want to foot the bill. We sit back with apathy while governing bodies seize monies for the military or the pork barrel, but we scream when poor lackeys like teachers beg.

The lottery is perhaps the best indicator of how want to avoid pain in paying taxes. Accurately described as a form of voluntary income tax, the lottery may slow down from its initial fervor, but it will never want for takers.

In fine, the lottery is a painless way of paying taxes, because those who play the lottery are driven by that grand old American motivation: the greed incentive. Few people mind seeing their money used by the state if they are given a chance to hit upon some big money.

The lottery's first cousin, bingo, serves a similar function. It would appear that giving a generous offering to the church of one's choice is too difficult for many people. Or shall we say, it is simply not a priority.

Nevertheless, that same money which many churchgoers cling to as needed for themselves is gladly released if bingo presents an opportunity for making an easy kill.

Yes, it is obvious that this cousin of the lottery is just a painless way of contributing to a church or to other charitable causes. We find the good old capitalistic greed incentive even here in God's house.

Back to the bake sales which we mentioned at the outset of this discussion. They are not an occasion of making money as in the case of a lottery or bingo, but they do afford a less painful way of giving than an outright donation.

There is a related phenomenon in which churches cannibalize each other through fund-raising events, musicals and through bazaars. Naturally, the root problem is always the same: how to procure revenues in a painless way.

Seeking painless or less painful ways to give is not wrong in itself, but it may betray an attitude which is selfish. While not denying the social fun of bazaars and bingo, we need to explore our deepest motivations for giving.

SENIOR CITIZENS HAPPENINGS By Eve McDonald

THANKSGIVING BAGS

We thank Coast Salvage for all of the donated items we were able to share with our participants. Burger King gave us the bags, and Coast Salvage helped fill them. They have promised to do a repeat for Christmas.

We have also received "extras" for our Meals-On-Wheels clients from Coast Salvage and other interested persons and civic groups. We were able to send our Meals-On-Wheels folks fresh oranges and apples for their Thanksgiving dinner. Thanks for caring, all you kind folks.

CHRISTMAS PARTY

The American Legion Post 139 and Auxiliary will host our Christmas party again this year on Wednesday, Dec. 11 at 11 a.m. at the Legion Home.

All of the seniors signed up with us and those RSVP are invited. Senator Vic Franciewicz and his group will entertain again. They are a lot of fun, and play good music, too!

Thanks, you guys.

We will have good food, fellowship and entertainment. Who could ask for anything more? Door prizes? OK, those too!

We are still selling chances on the beautiful picture donated by Carl Baldenhofer and the lovely afghan crocheted by Louise Williams. Anyone with an extra $1 can get changes.

The Center will be closed between Christmas Eve and New Year's Day. We will be delivering meals for those days, though some of the meals will be bag or frozen dinners.

CLASSES

If you see a bunch of senior citizens in beautifully decorated sweat shirts—they did them at the Center. We really had an enthusiastic bunch in the first class, and the last class is about ready to do theirs. It is amazing how good an old style common sweat shirt can look!

The porcelain dolls are coming along too. We have lots of busy senior hard at work around here. If you are 60-plus, come join us and develop your talents.

NEW FREEZER

Tee Oliver has a nice new freezer in the kitchen. The Center made the money for this by selling paper, cans, donated items, raffles, etc. We thank everyone involved.

NEEDED

Large brown paper bags from the grocery store

Aluminum cans

Ceiling in our arts and crafts rooms (the tile is falling down around us).

Happy Holidays to all from all of us at the Center.

SSC soccer squads dominate the field

BY TRACI BONNEY

The SSC soccer Rock-A-Chaws are 5-1-1 overall and 2-0 in district after their first seven games of the season.

The Rocks went into a two-rotation shoot out with Long Beach November 25 in the season opener. Tied at 1-1 at the end of regulation, the two teams battled to a 4-4 tie in the first rotation. SSC took the lead and kept it in the second rotation to win 8-6.

On November 29 and 30, the Rocks played a tournament in Houma, La., winning two and tying one to win their pool, then winning the quarterfinals.

SSC first defeated Rummel

8-1 and South Terrebonne 9-1, and tied 0-0 with Mandeville to move to the quarterfinals, where the Rocks won 4-0 over Hahnville. In the semi-finals, SSC lost 1-0 to Mandeville.

On December 5, SSC won its second district game 3-0 against St. John. Rock Raul Aragon scored all three goals with assists from Kendall Daniels, Brooks Quinlan and Drew Scafide. SSC's top defender was Michael Erdos, who helped the Rocks preserve their shutout.

The SSC junior varsity team is undefeated after two games with victories of 5-1 over Long Beach and 4-0 over St. John.

BACK TO NATURE

BY LYDIA D. SCHULTZ

The yard is depressingly quiet this time of year. The only movement is a leaf or two which pulls my eyes to its waffeling motions through the air. Occasionally the activity picks up, but it is a far cry from the summer when there are birds everywhere.

This lack of activity can be attributed to several things. We haven't had enough cold weather to kill off the natural food sources. It is warm and muggy enough to keep insects out, and birds feed on them.

You've heard the old theory that birds become dependent on bird feeders. Well, I scoff at that old myth every year when the birds leave my very-well-stocked feeders to go au natural.

Sure, I've had some White-throated Sparrows, Cardinals and Blue Jays. The Titmice and Chickadees occasionally show up. One lone Goldfinch put in a scanty appearance. The usual guys come by, but not many and not too often.

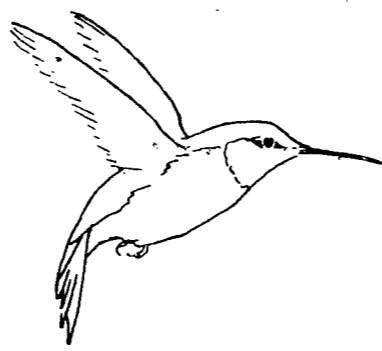

Another thing that affects feeder birds during the late fall and winter is the presence of predatory birds such as Sharp-shinned Hawks. They winter here. These are small hunters (approximately 11" long) that prey on birds and small mammals.

This is okay. It's natural. But it does affect my feeders a lot at times.

When I see a bird frozen for an endless amount of time, not even moving its head, I don't need to go look to see if a "sharpie" is near. *

Big excitement came on Nov. 14. Early a.m., I'd just finished my walk and was watering a plant when I heard the sound of either a Ruby-throated hummingbird or a Black-chinned hummingbird. They're in the same family, so they do sound alike.

Knowing that they only make sounds if other hummers are near, I ran around to the "good" garden area with all the blossoms.

And the activity was tremendous. Mind you, it was three days after the front had moved in. My buddy, Nancy Newfield, the hummingbird expert, tells me that that's when they usually show up—several days after the fronts. (Being curious, I wonder where they've been in the meantime! Don't you?)

A Buff-bellied hummingbird was chasing a Black-chinned so furiously that at first I thought it was two Buffs. Time proved that theory wrong. Just one.

The two eventually settled down to a nice arrangement: one part of the yard for the Buff-bellied hummer and one part of the yard for the other. I was thrilled.

I know that I couldn't claim them to be wintering with me until they'd stayed at least two weeks. Too often, this time of year will find them coming, tanking up on food, and off they go.

So I started my vigil of watching each morning for the very confident, loud Buff to feed. Once I heard or saw him, I felt better. He even sang several times, which let me know it was an adult male. (It's not much of a song, believe me! Hummers that do sing are not melodious!)

But six days was all I got to enjoy him. Eight for the Black-chinned. Where they went I'll never know.

Seemed to me that the bushes and feeders should've kept them. Maybe they'll be back.

There's another front coming through as of this writing. It's a great time to be looking for Rufous hummers. Keep the feeders clean and well stocked.

Good birding!

Twilight Christmas tour

Scenic Drive homes featured in CES fund-raiser

BY JANET MCQUEEN

Thousands of brilliant white tiny lights will beckon visitors to the 500 block of Pass Christian's Scenic Drive this evening from 4-7 for a tour of five historic homes.

Christmas trees, angels, stars and crosses crafted by Job Corps students and wrapped in shiny garland glistening with lights will hang from the huge live oak trees which line the block.

Delectable homemade gourmet entrees and desserts will be sold, to make holiday entertaining a snap for the busy hostess. "Gourmet-to-Go" will be available at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Alfred Levert II, 533 E. Scenic.

Sherried Shrimp, Sueraine's Seafood Gumbo, Sirloin Tips Burgundy, Chocolate Kahlua Cheesecake and Creme de Menthe Brownies are some of the selections prepared by parents of Coast Episcopal School students. The items will be available frozen, but visitors may sample each of the foods at the homes on the tour.

Homes on view will be those of Dr. and Mrs. William Hopper, 551 E. Scenic Drive; Mr. and Mrs. J. Alfred Levert III, 533 E. Scenic Drive; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hines, 519 E. Scenic Drive; Mr. and Mrs. Sadun Tor, 513 E. Scenic Drive; and Mr. and Mrs. Reilly Stonecipher, 503 E. Scenic Drive.

The Hoppers' one-story framed Colonial Revival home, known as Ballymire, was built as a two-room Creole cottage with nogging construction.

An inset gallery with chamfered posts shelters the entire 11-bay facade. The original portion of the home features exposed beaded beams and beaded baseboard.

Markle House or the Leverts' home is a well-proportioned, two-story brick, hip-roofed Colonial Revival dwelling with flanking, one-story, hip-roofed wings.

The double-tiered inset gallery has cabinets enclosed with louvered blinds. The fence, landscaping and brick were selected to complement the period piece, designed by Richard Koch of Koch & Wilson in New Orleans.

Another Colonial Revival dwelling is the Hines' home or the Breaux-Clay House. The two-story frame home has a double-tiered inset gallery with giant-order square columns.

A column frontispiece surrounds the single-leaf door with leaded-glass upper panel and carved lower panel. On the west side, there is a two-story hip-roofed addition to the west side and a porte-cochere on the eastern end.

The Tor home, known as the Breaux-Pritchard, was built around 1910 and is a picturesque, two-story chalet-type bungalow. The double-tiered inset gallery features pergola detailing and extends into a porte-cochere on the western end.

Built between 1895 and 1915, the Stonecipher home is two stories with a central pavilion. The double-tiered gallery is set with fluted, Tuscan ionic columns.

There are full-length four-over-four windows in the service gallery. Renovations and additions were done in 1986.

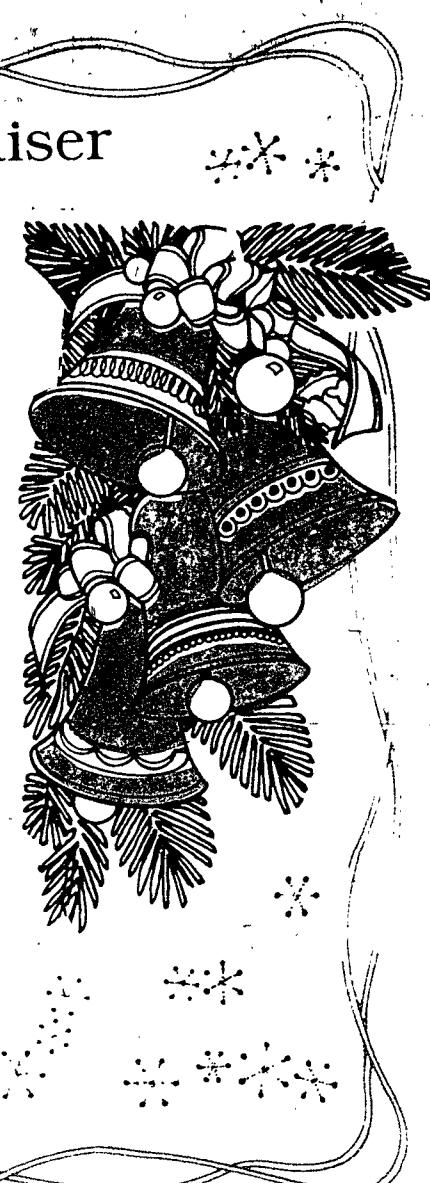

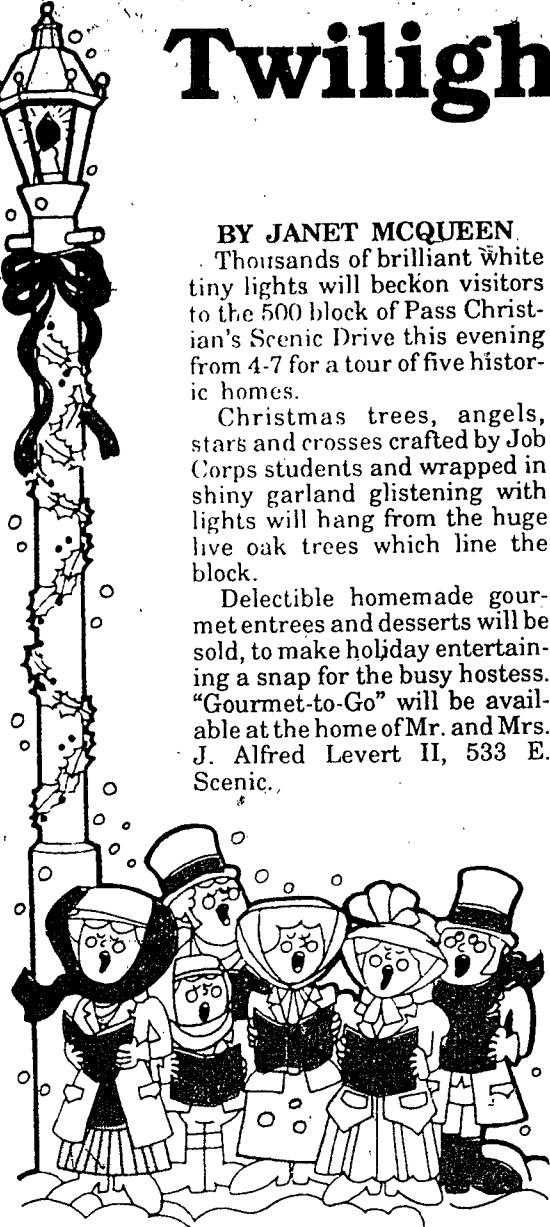

Entertainment during the tour will be provided by Christine Andres, French horn; the Consortium Renaissance Players; Dean Curtis, piano; Judy D'Angelo, voice; Courtney Hopper, violin; Ann Hopper, piano; Cathy Manein, guitar-voice; William Mohler, cello; Jennifer Smith, flute; Southern Mississippi classical guitar players, Sweet Adelines; the Suzuki Players; and Trinity Episcopal Church handbell performers.

Strolling carolers will be members of Coast Episcopal Elementary Show Choir, Coast Episcopal High Singers, Junior Girl Scout Troop 507 and Trinity Episcopal EYC.

The area will be closed to traffic, and visitors are asked to park at Trinity Episcopal Church, where a shuttle service will be offered.

Tour tickets are available at each end of the block for $12 for adults and $4 for children. Proceeds benefit Coast Episcopal Schools.

Less is better for Christmas 1991

Well, Thanksgiving has come and gone. Memories of family get-togethers and culinary delights are fading fast as we join the throngs of shoppers searching for that "perfect" gift for each person on the Christmas list.

Americans operate under the assumption that if a little is good, a lot is better. For instance more money, more leisure, more fun, more cars and bigger houses are considered desirable. However, I challenge you to make this a happier Christmas by choosing less.

To experience less stress, consider looking at your expectations and bringing them in line with the realities of your life.

Many of us grew up believing that we should have everything we want at Christmas, and as adults, media messages reinforce that perception.

We believe that everyone is happy, giving, loving and full of appreciation at this time of the year. The truth is that no event makes everything perfect. Happiness comes from within an individual not from without.

Fewer activities simplify the holidays. If you "just say no" to some of the invitations you receive, you will have more time to stay at home with family and create holiday fun.

You may even enjoy watching TV specials together. "The Grinch Who Stole Christmas" may be the centerpiece of a family evening.

CLUBS, AUXILIARIES

Veterans of WWI Auxiliary

The Veterans of World War I Auxiliary of Bay St. Louis met Nov. 27 at the senior citizens dining hall. The meeting was called to order by Genevieve Cole, president. Opening prayer was presented by Tuleter Oliver, and the Pledge of Allegiance was recited by all.

Past national president Pauline Charping read the minutes of the previous meeting.

Four new members were welcomed, all daughters and granddaughters of a veteran of World War I, Shirley Clemons, Virginia Kenney, Alene Ward and Ruth Ann Malazzo. Pauline Charping gave a report on the visit of national senior vice president Olive Kelner of Grand Falls, S.D.

Mrs. Kelner was very impressed by the hospitality of the Bay St. Louis people. She received welcome letters from Mayor Edward Favre, Congressman Gene Taylor and from the president of the chamber of commerce and a magnolia made by veterans from the Veterans Administration. State Senator Victor Franckiewicz was guest at the reception and welcomed her.

President Cole thanked the members for their work as volunteers at the VA Hospital and nursing homes.

A delicious Thanksgiving dinner was enjoyed. The table was decorated by Tuleter Oliver. She also gave corsages to the members.

The next meeting will be in December, date to be announced later.

SEALING TINY TRAPS

Q. How common are "pits and fissures", and how do they affect the teeth?

A. These very tiny depressions and grooves are normally present on the chewing surfaces of the back teeth. They invite decay because it's difficult to keep them free of plaque and bits of food. Even a single bristle of a toothbrush is too big to reach into these miniature crevices. Dr. Frank Conaway Fortunately, an effective defense is available at the dental office. This is the application of a sealant, an invisible film, as a barrier to keep plaque and food particles out of the pits and fissures. Ideally, a child should get the benefit of this defense as soon as the permanent molars and premolars come in.

The procedure is painless and takes little time. The teeth are cleaned and the surfaces treated with a mild solution to help the sealant adhere. The coating then is "painted" on with a brush and is allowed to harden. At scheduled checkups in subsequent years, the dentist determines if it's time for another application. Compared with treating cavities, having a sealant applied is a cheerful, low-cost experience.

Powe named program manager for NASA tri-state educational program

Special to the Echo
NASA's John C. Stennis Space Center (SSC) announced recently the appointment of Dr. David L. Powe as the on-site program manager for the agency's innovative Tri-State Education Initiative (TSEI), effective Jan. 2.

Bay physician recertified

Dr. Sidney A. Chevis of Bay St. Louis has been recertified as a diplomate of the American Board of Family Practice (ABFP) as a result of passing a recertification examination offered by the ABFP. The physician thus maintains specialist status in the medical specialty of family practice.

ABFP diplomates must continue to show proof of competence in the field of comprehensive, continuing care of the family by being recertified every six years. The family practice specialty was the first to require diplomats to be recertified on a continuing basis.

in a 50-mile radius of NASA's new Advanced Solid Rocket Motor facility near Iuka, the TSEI's goal is to "promote and support the efforts of communities therein, in developing a quality education system that will permit their citizens to obtain the necessary skills for gainful employment—into the 21st century—in America's high-technology economy."

Powe will work closely with the recently established TSEI Consortium and its chairman, Roger L. Moore, superintendent of the Colbert County Schools System, Ala. and its director. The consortium, sponsored by NASA, is an association of 30 school districts in Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee organized to work cooperatively to enhance and broaden the capabilities of their respective education systems within the tri-state area. Representation on the consortium and its nine-member executive board is provided by each of the 30 superintendents.

Assuming on-site management of the TSEI, Powe will be located permanently in the soon-to-be-operational Tri-State Learning Center outside of Iuka. He will work closely with NASA staff at SSC, the Marshall Space Flight Center, Huntsville, Ala., and NASA Headquarters Education Division, Washington, D.C.

Powe will continue to facilitate education initiatives within the tri-state area, coordinate the participation of other federal agencies, state organizations and the private sector. A major task will be to develop specific education programs and to promote and support community efforts to develop a world-class education system.

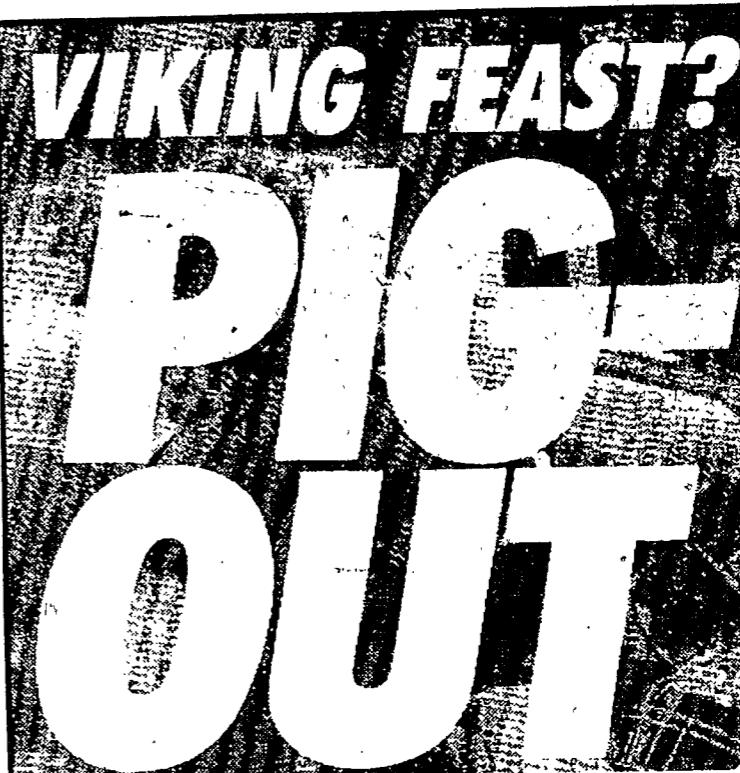

Powe brings to this position excellent qualifications, including extensive educational experience. Powe received his doctorate in education administration from the University of Southern Mississippi in 1984, his master's degree in social work in 1975, and his bachelor's degree in social work and psychology in 1969, both from Mississippi State University. His strong leadership and communication skills and ties with the society and culture of the region will also be of great benefit to the program.

Powe's most recently held position was president of Mississippi Delta Community College. Under three years of his leadership, the school's enrollment increased by 39 percent.

Some of Powe's other accomplishments in education include serving as superintendent for McComb Public Schools and chairman for the executive committee of the Mississippi Association of Junior/Community Colleges. Powe was also elected to serve as president for the Mississippi Association of Colleges.

The Tri-State Education Initiative is a cooperative effort undertaken by NASA to work toward accomplishment of the national educational goals outlined in America 2000, President Bush's bold education strategy.

IT'S TIME TO ADOPT THE TRUE SPIRIT OF THE HOLIDAYS

Holiday time is again upon us, as the culmination of a year that was marred by war and in many cases, financial hardship caused by the recession. Nonetheless, regardless of our situation or our faith, it's time to put those distressing things behind us and renew the true spirit of the season: getting in touch with friends and loved ones, mending quarrels, and being kinder and more patient even with strangers. Whether you decorate your home with Christmas lights or Chanukah candles, it will seem a lot brighter if you are at peace with the world and with yourself. As busy as you are at this time, take the time to attend your House of Worship for a refresher course in the true meaning of the holiday spirit. It's love and tolerance, for now and all the other times of the year.

A DIFFERENT VIEW

By Traci Bonney

It's that time of year—blinking lights, decorations, drooling retailers, piles of paper (well, I meant credit card notices, but if you prefer wrapping paper...), the warmth of holiday spirit, the threat of "holiday hips"... and my birthday.

My 26th birthday, to be more precise. As a friend of mine, who is about two months older than me, puts it, we're "hitting the backside of 20."

Relax; I'm not about to go into one of those maudlin tearjerker (or more likely, columnist's-neck-wringer) soliloquies about how much I haven't done with my life so far.

In fact, I'm pretty content with where I am. My own place, a job I enjoy, a car that may one day be paid for, a budding writing career (sorry if you haven't read this feature regularly; the explanation would take too long), some reliable friends, plenty of activities, a few hobbies to consume what little spare time I have—and all at a pace with which I'm comfortable. Please don't get the idea life is perfect for me, though; it isn't yet.

I'd like to be married, but no husband has shown up yet. In fact, I'd like to have been married by this time. Truth is, though, I haven't been ready for marriage up until now—and may not be now, for that matter. (Guys, this isn't a singles ad, either, so don't start looking for a P.O. Box to write to, okay?)

And now, a reaction to the contents of this column from the man on the street: Traci, what possessed you to write this nonsense?

Beats me.

No, seriously—I guess the holidays tend to put people in a contemplative mood. This time of the year, you think about your accomplishments, your failures, your past, present and future, and all that other stuff.

Then again, I could just be desperate for a column topic.

CIRCLES OF CONFUSION

All about photography 'n stuff

By T.H. 'Doc' Toups

kjfuyf pty mnocxzzovb
eqrikmb lk jhgrd.

Ciphers are a set of letters or numbers used to represent other letters or numbers, for the sake of secrecy. Spies love 'em and intelligence agencies around the world have spent millions of dollars on ultra-sophisticated computer programs to create ever more complex versions.

I couldn't operate a Fisher-Price computer if my life depended on it, so I had my four-year-old son sit in front of my typewriter and tap out the first sentence of this column. Not only did this save me millions of dollars, but it allowed my son Alexander to become one of America's relatively few published pre-school authors.

I thought it rather clever of him to type out a message that looked like a cipher, but was really just a bunch of gobbledegook. It's important for spies to be subtle!

The typewriter he used came out of the factory around the time Eisenhower was president. In that era, Americans made great typewriters, the Japanese made terrible cameras, as the spy camera was in its heyday, and the Russian alphabet was comprised of a bunch of really weird-looking letters. Much has changed in the intervening decades, but the Russian alphabet still looks very strange.

In the '90s American spies can simply watch CNN or read the Sea Coast Echo, Russian spies barter their cameras in bread lines, and the Japanese make excellent typewriters. All of these things represent the anxiously awaited "peace dividend" of the post cold war age.

Spy lore dictates that practitioners are supposed to order a "Martini. Dry. Very dry." They're also supposed to wear tuxedos.

In a room full of tuxedo attired, martini-sipping spies, I can just see myself standing there in blue jeans and ancient leather jacket, sipping a beer or the odd bourbon. They'd drag me through the kitchen and throw me out the service entrance.

"What bloody cheek," some British Major-type would announce to mumbles of general agreement and decorum would prevail.

Or course, all good photographers know that the cutest waitresses take their breaks at the service entrance. There in the shadows, my operative would pass me a microcassette of film, whisper her apartment number and meeting instructions in French and disappear into the kitchen.

I don't speak French, so that is one liaison which would never take place, but I'd have my pictures and that is, after all, what a photographer is for...

You don't have to like martinis, or even wear tuxedos to appreciate spy cameras. Nor will you have to break the bank to afford one.

Those on a limited budget might consider one of the Minolta 16mm still cameras of the '60s. The cassettes are hard to find (though Minolta still sells them) and the cameras can be had for around $20-$50, depending upon model.

The classic spy camera is the Minox. This is the little palm-sized precision jewel which usually shows up in the spy movies. A good user camera can be had for around $150, though collectible variants can go much higher.

While the little Minox is big on glamour, its photo-taking ability is rather less than Hollywood would have us believe. Though it has adjustable shutter speeds, its fixed aperture 15mm, f/3.5 lens only produces a negative of 8x11mm. These fingernail size negatives are simply not up to producing high quality large prints.

The Minox and Minolta are only two of the hundreds of 'spy cameras' produced since the 19th century, but they are the easiest to find film for. A good professional camera store should be able to order fresh film for either of them. Special film stocks can be ordered through Micro Tec Industries of San Diego, CA (sorry, I don't have their address).

Readers who may be in possession of a Minox are invited to contact me at the Echo. I have factory serial number lists and may be able to accurately date your camera and provide other information about the Minox or other subminiature cameras.

Those with a yen to try their hand at subminiature photography might find that it leads to really neat fantasies. As you slip a little Minox into your shirt pocket, its suddenly not hard to imagine that your ten-year-old sedan is actually a Lotus Elan (with ejection seats) and that the quick trip to the bank is really an espionage mission against an international drug money cartel.

If you find yourself disappointed with the quality of your 11"x14" subminiature enlargements, just remember that the fantasy is always better than the reality... and usually a lot more fun.

Pursuant to Section 19-3-19 Mississippi Code of 1972, a Special Meeting of the Board of Supervisors of Hancock County is hereby set on December 12, 1991 at 9:00 a.m. to accept plans and specifications for installation of a communication tower, antenna, transmission line and relocating of transmitter to the Hancock County Justice Facility in order to correct the instability of the existing tower and which may result in the failure of the communication system for the Justice Facility.
